

Fairtrade organisations and businesses

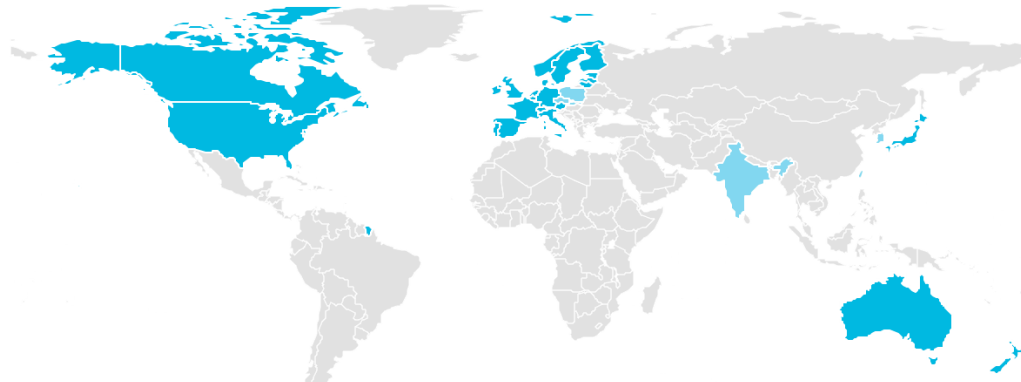

Your local Fairtrade organisation is the best place to find out where you can buy Fairtrade products, how to become a licensee, or learn what's happening near you.

Our members include national Fairtrade organisations, marketing organisations and applicant members.

The map below shows our member organisations; further down the page you'll find full contact details for each of them.

Please note that depending on where your business is registered, you will need to contact either a National Fairtrade Organisation, a Fairtrade Marketing Organisation, or Fairtrade International to license the FAIRTRADE Mark for your products.

Businesses and Fairtrade

Fairtrade works to develop markets and establish collaborative trade relations between producer organisations and businesses.

Companies seeking sustainable supply chains are a critical component of the Fairtrade system – by sourcing Fairtrade products and licensing the FAIRTRADE Marks, they support farmers and workers at Fairtrade producer organisations to take more control over their own futures.

These businesses also offer shoppers an ever-increasing variety of ethically sourced, independently certified choices, showing trade can be fairer, more sustainable and better for all involved.

Contact information for National Fairtrade Organisations

National Fairtrade organisations license the FAIRTRADE Marks \(/about/fairtrade-marks/\) on products and promote Fairtrade in their territory. As founding members, many of these organisations helped to establish Fairtrade International in 1997.

If you have questions about licensing the FAIRTRADE Mark and being able to use it in your products, contact a National Fairtrade Organisation in your country.
